of death in some patients in the General Hospital who were suffering from various conditions of the lungs, such as bronchitis, pleurisy, catarhal pneumonia, etc. In some cases the influenza itself was the cause of the development of catarhal pneumonia with a fatal issue. In general, the influenza had a deleterious influence over the sick patients who had already been weakened by other ailments. In one case in the General Hospital, influenza became complicated with encephalitis, and led to a fatal issue, as was proved by the post-mortem examination. The rumour that the epidemic had also given origin to typhoid fever is false. Great embarrassment has been produced by influenza in the obstetrical departments of the General Hospital, as the commencement of real puerperal fever can frequently hardly be distinguished from the prevailing epidemic. The duration of the affection is very short, from 24 to 30 hours, but relapses are the rule, and the affection then lasts 8 and 10 days, and even longer.

Besides the principal types of the affection there are some of peculiar character. In my own case nausea was the most distressing feature of the complaint. I fell ill quite suddenly, with symptoms of fever and prostration and a sense of weakness in all the limbs; I had a temperature of 40° C, and severe headache. Owing to the pyrexia I had also delirium, which made those attending me fear that the disease was typhoid fever. The illness came to an end in twenty-four hours, when I became prostrate; but in a few days relapse occurred; the symptoms were, however, less severe than in the first attack. Antipyrin, brandy, and the application to the head of cold compresses of vinegar and water gave some relief.

Later I took the number of applications for admission to the hospitals on account of influenza was exceedingly great. For many years the hospitals have not been so crowded as they are at present. On Sunday, December 22nd, about 70 men and 40 women, suffering from influenza, applied for admission into the General Hospital; out of these only 50 could be admitted, and the rest had to be sent away for want of beds. At ordinary times from 30 to 40 persons are at most admitted into the General Hospital on Sundays. The same proportion prevailed in the other Vienna hospitals. Under these circumstances extraordinary measures had to be resorted to, and at the instance of the Director of the General Hospital, Professor Charles Böhm, and the Statthaltereirth, Dr. v. Karajau, as well as the directors of the two clinics of internal medicine, Professors Nothnagel and Kahler, the so-called clinical "Reservezimmer" (reserve rooms) were placed at the disposal of the patients. On the evening of the same day all the clinics and wards for internal medicine were overcrowded. For urgent cases an affiliated branch of the General Hospital was placed at the disposal of the patients suffering from the epidemic. This institution, which is situated in a suburb of Vienna, is a small hospital, and contains only 110 beds; out of these 70 were occupied on the same day. The Wieden and Rudolphstiftung hospitals, which were also overcrowded, had the patients transported into the Kaiser Franz Joseph Spital, which, on other occasions, is reserved for cases of small-pox, etc. Should these measures prove insufficient, emergency hospitals will have to be erected.

The epidemic has been very severe among the tramcar and post-office employees; among the latter, those whose work exposed them much to the weather suffered most.

Among the pupils and teachers in the public schools influenza is so prevalent that the Christmas holidays have been prolonged. In the Imperial and Royal Opera, the performances had to be very frequently changed, owing to the sudden illness of the singers. A considerable increase of the epidemic has taken place among the troops of the Vienna garrison, in the 21st Jägerbatillon. Almost all the officers and a great part of the troops have suffered from the disease; and the same is true of several other barracks in Vienna. The druggists are doing an enormous trade in antipyrin, quinine, phænaetic, salicyl, etc. Medical men have frequently to make from forty to fifty visits a day. The Christmas holidays and the New Year's Eve (Silvesterabend), which is usually one of the merriest evenings in Vienna, have been comparatively melancholy. Professor Nothnagel had the opportunity of making clinical observations of influenza on himself.

The epidemic seems to have reached its highest point at Vienna, but no exact statistics are yet forthcoming.

Numerous cases of influenza are announced from Lemberg, Cracow, Buda-Pesth, Temesvar, Klausenburg, etc.
death, speaks of him as "well known a few years ago as one of the most skilful surgeons in these Provinces." Dr. Deakin had twice to take sick leave, in 1876, and again, in 1885. On his return from leave in the beginning of 1886 he was posted as civil surgeon to Mirzapur, but subsequently reverted to military duty, and then the 5th Pioneers was raised in 1887; he was posted to the medical charge of the regiment. With it he served in the Hazara or Black Mountain campaign of December, 1888, and was mentioned in despatches for gallantry at the action of Kotkai.

Dr. Deakin also for many years published and edited the Indian Medical Journal, which comes to an abrupt conclusion with his death.

HOSPITAL AND DISPENSARY MANAGEMENT.

THE BRADFORD INFIRMARY.

Sr,—Referring to your leaderette on “The Bradford Infirmary,” allow me to say that “the well-informed correspondent who has added his approval upon the subject” has been very mistaken if he has supposed that “a proposal to make a charge of 6d. to every outpatient has been made to the Board of Governors.” No such proposal has ever been made, or even mentioned, at any meeting of the medical staff or of the Board of Governors. The out-patient department is overcrowded, and it is necessary to do something to check those who are not justified in applying; it has therefore been suggested that an officer should be appointed to inquire into the circumstances of all applicants for treatment. This would shut out many who at present impose upon the charity. It has also been suggested that the weekly wage limit which entitles people to gratuitous treatment should be, for a married couple, 18s., with 2s. additional for each child; and that those families whose incomes are between this gratis limit—and the present wage limit of the infirmary, which is 18s. for parents and 9s. added for each child—should contribute a small sum towards the cost of their treatment.

If patients whose incomes do not exceed this contributory limit cannot afford to pay the ordinary moderate fees charged by most medical practitioners, and are still able to contribute something to the funds of the infirmary, I know of no sufficient reason why they should not be allowed to do so. These checks would diminish the abuses of the out-patient department without the necessity of creating greater evils such as provident dispensaries or the proposed Public Medical Service.

I am anxious to remove the shadow which at present rests upon my colleagues in consequence of such a gross misrepresentation of the above suggestions. If any still remains, it must be upon me,—I am, etc.,

J. H. Bell, M.B.,
Honorary Medical Officer, Bradford Infirmary.

THE PROPOSED PUBLIC MEDICAL SERVICE.

Dr. Robert R. Rentzoll (Liverpool) writes: I regret that the members do not seem to have grasped my ideas as to the above. They are these,—That we must have a cash scale of fees for those of the industrial classes making under 20s. and 40s. per week. The details can be altered if need be. The point to grasp is this: If the hospital committee says: "We shall co-operate with you, and turn away all those making over the ‘wage limit,’ but before doing so, we must know where and by whom such cases are to be treated. At present, although we secure co-operation, such patients would have nowhere to go but the prescribing chemists, quacks, bogus clubmen, and unqualified practitioners. They could not go to the provident dispensaries, for these do not give treatment until one has been a member for a month. Where, therefore, are they to go? My idea is that in the above service there should be two types—accept, and reject, and a provident; and that those provident dispensaries already existing should establish a cash department. But I do not think it a matter of vital importance whether such cash patients are treated at the doctors’ homes, at their own homes, at a provident dispensary, or at a public medical service. The point is to let the employers of labour and subscribers to hospitals note that we have a practical scheme ready. If we do not, then we shall perpetrate two great blunders now working much evil in Manchester. There, if a patient who is slightly over their “wage limit” go to the hospital, he is told that he may secure free hospital treatment for one month if he give a guarantee he has joined their provident dispensary. Now the “entrance fee” to the provident dispensary is 6d., and 1d. per week. Therefore, if a man pay 7d. to the provident dispensary he has the necessity of treatment for 7d. This is one of the weak points in the Manchester Infirmary scheme, and must be avoided by us. But if we can secure a cash system of fees for immediate treatment, either by one practitioner, or by several combining, we shall avoid this error.

May I point out another fault in the Manchester system? By the laws of their provident dispensary, a provident dispensary doctor has a right to send a provident patient to the infirmary, and no question must be asked, and he must receive free treatment. Now their provident dispensary has done away with the 8s. “wage limit,” for why, none seem able to tell, and so a clever mechanic has only to join the provident dispensary, and if he be

In consequence of the prevalence of scarlet fever at Sheldwich, a village near Faversham, it has been deemed advisable to close the schools for a fortnight.

MEDICAL MAGISTRATE.—Mr. W. Inglis Mason, L.R.C.P., M.R.C.S., Sudbury, Suffolk, has been placed on the commission of the peace for that borough.

A BUTCHER, doing a large business in the poorer part of Worcester, has been sentenced to two months' hard labour for exposing for sale meat unfit for human food.

PROFESSOR WESTPHAL of Berlin, the well-known neurologist, is so seriously ill that for a considerable time past he has been unable to discharge the duties of his office. His place is taken in the meantime by Dr. Oppenheim.

It is announced that the editorship of the Archiv der Pharmacie, the organ of the German Pharmaceutical Society, will from the beginning of the present year be in the hands of Professor E. Schmidt, of Marburg, and Dr. H. Beckura, of Brunswick.

Lord George Hamilton, First Lord of the Admiralty, will take the chair at the sixty-ninth annual court of governors of the Dreadnought Seamen's Hospital at the Hôtel Métropole at 3 P.M. on February 18th.

The report of the Norwich Hospital Saturday and Sunday Fund is not of a satisfactory character, the total sum raised in 1889 being not so large as any of the past six collections for the Hospital Sunday Fund.

The Mercers' Company, on December 20th, ordered the following sums to be paid to certain London hospitals:—London, £1,000; Guy's, £1,000; Middlesex, £1,000; St. Mary's, £1,000; King's College, £200; Westminster, £200.

The typhoid fever epidemic which prevails in the village of Linlithgow Bridge is said to be spreading with rapidity. On December 28th there were over twenty cases and no signs of abatement. The drainage of the locality is being inquired into, and, pending an examination of the water, two wells have been closed.

The question of the appointment of a medical officer for the county of Glamorgan was, on a resolution of the Chairman, discussed at a recent meeting of the Local Government Committee of the Glamorgan County Council, and, the opinion of the majority being in favour of deferring the question, the resolution was withdrawn.
LORD WOLSLEY ON AMBULANCE WORK.—Lord Wolsley, in distributing recently the certificates at a branch of the St. John Ambulance Association, bore testimony to the value of such instruction as the Association afforded, both in the crowded streets and on the battlefield. Speaking of the latter, he said that he had not known as much yet as he had known when he had been through experiences of invaluable service. He had seen men bleeding to death beside him, not knowing how to help them. With regard to the kindred association of hospital nurses, he bore high testimony to the value of their work in the hospital in the London, which was under the charge of Colonel Duncan during the war.

HARYKIAN SOCIETY OF LONDON.—The following is a list of the names of gentlemen proposed by the Council as officers of the Society for the year 1890: President: *Thomas Bryant. Vice-Presidents: F. H. Champneys, M.B.; *J. E. Lane; *S. Mackenzie, M.D.; R. S. Main, M.D.; Treasurer: G. F. Field. Hon. Secretaries: Robert Maguire, M.D.; *D'Arcy Power, Council: *T. Buzzard, M.D.; J. H. Drew; J. H. This asterisk prefixed to the names of those gentlemen who did not hold the same office the preceding year. The election will take place at the annual general meeting of the Society, to be held on Thursday, the 16th instant.

A CORONER'S COURT FOR MANCHESTER.—At a recent meeting of the Manchester City Council, it was unanimously resolved that steps should be taken to provide a coroner and a new building for the Coroner's Court. Hitherto inquests have been held in a small room in John Street, which is not only exceedingly ill adapted for the purpose, but even, from its utter inadequacy, calculated seriously to damage the health of those who are compelled to attend the court. The medical officer of health, Dr. John Tatham, hearing that the subject was about to be brought before the Council, addressed a timely letter to the Mayor, urging the extreme importance of providing proper mortuary accommodation, and pointing out the iniquities, not to say dangers, which might arise from bodies being retained in private dwelling-houses for the purposes of a coroner's inquest. It is to be hoped that the recommendation of Dr. Tatham will receive that attention which the great importance of the subject deserves when the new arrangements are being made.

PATHOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON.—At the meeting on Tuesday next the following resolutions were read and sanctioned by the council for the year 1890: President: W. H. Dickinson, M.D. Vice-Presidents: James Andrew, M.D.; *Sir Joseph Fayrer; *F. Henry Pye-Smith, M.D.; Henry G. Sutton, M.D.; Richard Barwell; *J. Neville C. Davies-Colley; F. Howard Marsh; J. A congratulatory address was delivered, and a Festschrift, written in commemoration of the occasion by several of his most distinguished pupils, was formally presented to him. PROPOSED OBSTETRICAL AND GYNAECOLOGICAL SOCIETY FOR THE NORTH OF ENGLAND.—A preliminary meeting, called by circular, was held at the Queen's Hotel, Manchester, on December 16th, for the purpose of considering the advisability of instituting an obstetrical and gynecological society for the North of England. There was a large attendance of gentlemen from Manchester, Liverpool, Leeds, and surrounding towns. Letters or telegrams of apology for absence, and giving in adherence to the scheme, were received from Professor Chas. J. Wright, Leeds; Dr. Lloyd Roberts, Manchester; Mr. William Alexander and Dr. Macafe Campbell, Liverpool; and many others. Professor John Wallace, Liverpool, occupied the chair. He delivered a short address on the object of the meeting, and called upon Dr. Sinclair, Manchester, to supplement his remarks. Dr. James Braithwaite, Leeds, then proposed the following resolution: "That it is desirable to establish an obstetrical and gynecological society for the North of England, with centres in Manchester, Liverpool, and Leeds, and that the gentlemen who were present at this meeting be appointed as a committee to meet at the same place on January 17th—namely, Dr. Braithwaite, Messrs. Wright and Roson and Dr. Helier, Leeds; Drs. Wallace, Briggs, Burton, J. Armstrong, and Macafe Campbell, Liverpool; and Drs. Lloyd Roberts, Sinclair, Walter, Buccaney, and Donald. This Committee have power to add to their number, if it be thought desirable. That the added members would be drawn chiefly from the surrounding towns. CUYS OF THE CEREBELLM.

Dr. W. R. BADDEN (Cavendish Square, W.) writes: In your report of my paper on Cysts of the Cerebellum read before the Pathological Society, and published in the Journal of December last, I referred to a similar case recently reported by Dr. Major. The explanation of the origin of these cysts, to which I alluded, was made by Mr. Althorp, of Leeds, not by Mr. Shatlock, as reported in your column.

DENGUE AND INFLUENZA.

SURGEON E. J. BANERJEE RISK (Million Barracks, Gravesend) writes to point out the resemblance in certain respects of the epidemic at present prevailing in Europe to the smallpox of the Orient, especially in fever, great muscular aches, and pain in the glands of the neck and it seems to be the complications of dengue, and in the complication of swelling of the lymphatic glands, etc., and it will, perhaps, have been noticed to be followed by more or less anaemia or debility.

It would be difficult to know if this has been noticed in this epidemic, general and diffuse, bright red, especially on chest and abdomen, as in dengue, lasting one to three days, disappearing on pressure, and sometimes followed by great skin irritation and desquamation, especially of the palmar aspects of the hands and feet. The onset is sometimes very sudden. In my own case I felt quite well in the morning and had an appetite for breakfast, and during the time I was walking back to my bungalow in the Punjab, a distance of less than a mile, great frontal and ocipital headache came on and spread down the spine, with throbbing and burning of the eyeballs, and fever.

Dengue fever has been noticed to both follow and precede outbreaks of both yellow fever and cholera. In 1896 dengue was very prevalent amongst the soldiers in garrison in Umballa, Punjab, and was followed in the next year (1897) by an outbreak of cholera in the native city. I should add that this was merely a coincidence, though a belief does prevail as to its being a precursor of the more serious epidemic. The treatment found successful was belladonna extract in quarter-grain doses, t.d.s., or nearly as good from a mixture of bromide of potassium g. x and quinine gr. v., t.d.s.

Our correspondents are reminded that proximity is a great bar to publication, and, in the great hurry of business, any request for early insertion is not likely to be given effect without the strictest economy in time and length.
