NICE recommends tighter blood sugar control in diabetes to reduce risk of complications

On 11 September 2015, we changed some of the wording in the fourth paragraph of this News story (BMJ 2015;351:h4612, doi:10.1136/bmj.h4612), so that our summary of NICE's recommendations was clearer. The last sentence in this paragraph now reads: "adults with newly diagnosed type 1 diabetes should not be offered non-basal-bolus insulin regimens, such as twice daily mixed, basal only, or bolus only." Previously, this read: "adults with newly diagnosed type 1 diabetes should not be offered non-basal-bolus insulin regimens but rather twice daily mixed, basal only, or bolus only."
