Patients face five hour delays after private firm takes over transport service

To illustrate a shortened version of this story (BMJ 2016;353:i2153, doi:10.1136/bmj.i2153) in the “Seven Days in Medicine” section in the print issue of The BMJ of 23 April, we used a photograph of an ambulance from the Special Ambulance Transfer Service Ltd. The photograph was inappropriate in two ways:

- The service referred to in the story was run by Coperforma and not by the Special Ambulance Transfer Service Ltd.
 - The ambulance pictured has been out of service since 2007.
- We would like to apologise for the inappropriate use of this image and any confusion it may have caused.
