Baroness Bennet of Manor Castle mentioned The BMJ in a written question to the Department of Health and Social Care: Genetics: Screening, written question on 25 October 2023. "To ask His Majesty's Government what assessment they have made of Emma Wilkinson's article published in October 2022 in The BMJ on the impact of direct-to-consumer testing on the public and the NHS, and of how this relates to the regulation of direct-to-consumer health testing.”

Baroness Jenkin of Kennington mentioned The BMJ in a Lord’s debate on Children’s Health: Ultra-processed foods - questions for short debate on 25 October 2023. “There is now very good evidence, including a paper published last week in the BMJ, that for many people these products are addictive. Try telling a child to eat a single bowl—it is like recommending to smokers that they stick to one cigarette. These products are designed and marketed to be consumed in excess.”
