

OBITUARIES

Neil McDougall

Marie McDougall

Archibald Neil McDougall ("Neil") followed his brother, a classicist, to St Andrews. After house jobs in Dundee and Glasgow he moved to the medical research unit in Newcastle upon Tyne, where he met his future second wife, Marie, over an ectopic pregnancy. Neil was appointed consultant to Rutherglen Maternity Hospital in 1981. He pioneered the use of ultrasound in gynaecology in Glasgow and further developed ultrasound in obstetrics. He was a popular mentor and teacher. Neil was a passionate sailor, racing old wooden boats with Marie. After the children were born they sailed weekends and holidays on the Clyde and west coast in a "Tupperware" yacht. Neil died aboard Camus Bosta. He leaves Marie; their son, Ali, and daughter, Eilidh; and three daughters and four grandchildren from his first marriage.
