

G.P.'s Payment in a National Service

SIR,—With reference to the remuneration to be received by general practitioners under the State scheme there appears to be a grave objection to acceptance of the capitation fee system. If it is intended to double the number of practitioners to provide an efficient service, then surely the average income of doctors will eventually be halved, and most of us will face a steadily decreasing income instead of a gradual increase as is usual in all other walks of life.

Perhaps such an obvious point has been raised previously, but if not I would be glad if publicity could be given to the matter.—I am, etc.,

Newport Pagnall.
