Emergencies in the Home

Electricity, drowning, and burns

A FRASER-DARLING

The three emergencies of electricity, drowning, and burns are often found in the same room: in the same patient's work. It is unlikely that they will be present until after the accident has taken place. However, for the over-protective, I think it should be noted that the time of the accident is the reason for the occurrence of these events, and may affect the assessment and treatment of the patient. Complete knowledge of the history of the injury, including the circumstances and the circumstances of the injury, is necessary to provide an adequate assessment and treatment of the patient. The patient's history includes the circumstances and the circumstances of the injury, and is essential to the patient's treatment.