VIEWS AND REVIEWS

ACUTE PERSPECTIVE

David Oliver: Senior nurses should stand up for nursing

OPEN ACCESS

David Oliver, consultant in geriatrics and acute general medicine, Berkshire

In my 27 years as an NHS hospital doctor, my admiration for nurses in hands-on clinical roles has only grown. Whether staff nurses, ward sisters, charge nurses, specialist practitioners, or consultants, they're dedicated, skilled, underpaid, and often undervalued. I can't muster such consistent respect for their senior managers.

One advantage of medical career structures is that senior doctors can remain in clinical roles without losing status or income. It's hard for doctors in leadership to retain credibility if they no longer practise. This flexibility to return from management gives them independence; not so in nursing. Some executive nurses still use their registration to do exemplary shifts. But, once they've left the bedside, they generally won't return and would lose out if they did.

I think this is a big problem. Experiencing the job, as it is now, aids understanding. Advocacy for your profession is hard if you haven't practised it recently. Outspoken independence is constrained by corporate responsibility. Recent policy controversies in English nursing highlight this problem.

The Department of Health ducked Francis's recommendations on minimum safe nursing levels.¹ It belatedly asked the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE) for an independent review of the evidence,² but it stopped the work, perhaps because its implications looked inconvenient.³ The chief nurses of the Shelford Group of big teaching hospitals responded with a public letter opposing standardised safe staffing guidance.⁴

NHS England's chief nursing officer (effectively a civil servant in a body very close to government) agreed to lead the safe staffing work instead, defending the moves in a letter to chief nurses.⁵ Against a backdrop of 90% of acute NHS hospitals being short of their own safe nursing establishment,⁶ the Care Quality Commission told hospital wards they were short of nurses.⁷ Most chief nurses have, to be fair, protected the front line by prioritising nursing numbers over finance. But now, NHS planning guidance tells hospitals to reduce their "head count" and agency spend.⁸

The government has proposed withdrawal of bursaries from nursing students⁹ and the planned creation of non-graduate nursing associates.¹⁰ Yet evidence links the nursing skill mix, training, and numbers to patient safety and quality¹¹—surely a principal concern for nurses in top jobs. Opposition? This has come from the Royal College of Nursing¹² and some lobbying groups including respected academic nursing researchers.^{13 14}

Nurses are a big and indispensable NHS workforce. Outspoken resignations from government nursing roles would set an example, as would condemnation from chief nurses of large trusts. What we've had instead is silence as the clinical profession they used to practise is run into the ground.

Competing interests: None declared.

Provenance and peer review: Commissioned; not externally peer reviewed.

Follow David on Twitter, @mancunianmedic

- 1 Calkin S. Francis response: Hunt confirms no minimum safe staffing or HCA regulation. Nurs Times 2013 Nov 19. www.nursingtimes.net/clinical-subjects/patient-safety/francis-response-hunt-confirms-no-minimum-staffing-level-or-hca-regulation/5065512.fullarticle.
- 2 Lintern S. DH is yet to refer vital staffing guidance work to NICE. Nurs Times 2013 Aug 19. www.nursingtimes.net/roles/nurse-managers/surprising-lack-of-progress-on-nice-staffing-level-guidance/5062365.fullarticle.
- 3 National Health Executive. RCN expresses "concern" as NICE suspends nurse staffing levels work. 4 Jun 2015. www.nationalhealthexecutive.com/Workforce-and-Training/Page-227/rcn-expresses-concern-as-nice-suspends-nurse-staffing-levels-work.
- 4 Sheldford Group. Nurses' caution. 21 Nov 2013. http://sheldfordgroup.org/sub_group_article/chief-nurses/nurses-caution.
- 5 Cummings J, England NHS. Letter from chief nursing officer for England: ensuring the NHS is safely staffed. 11 Jun 2015. www.england.nhs.uk/wp-content/uploads/2015/06/cno-safe-staffing-letter-stakeholders.pdf.
- 6 Nurse shortage hits dangerous levels in 90% of hospitals. Guardian 2015 Dec 21. www.theguardian.com/society/2015/dec/21/nurse-shortage-dangerous-90-of-hospitals.
- 7 17 Hospitals with unsafe staffing, says Care Quality Commission. BBC News 2013 Jan 13. www.bbc.co.uk/news/health-21002205.
- 8 McKenna H, Dunn P. What the planning guidance means for the NHS: 2016-17 and beyond. Feb 2016. www.kingsfund.org.uk/sites/files/uk/field/publication_file/Planning-guidance-briefing-Kings-Fund-February-2016.pdf.
- 9 National Health Executive. Removing bursaries: a crushing blow for nursing students—RCN. 14 Dec 2015. www.nationalhealthexecutive.com/Health-Care-News/removing-bursaries-a-crushing-blow-for-nursing-students--rcn.
- 10 Department of Health. Nursing associate role offers route into nursing. 17 Dec 2015. www.gov.uk/government/news/nursing-associate-role-offers-new-route-into-nursing.
- 11 Ball J. Royal College of Nursing. Guidance on safe nurse staffing levels in the UK. 2010. www2.rcn.org.uk/_data/assets/pdf_file/0005/353237/003860.pdf.
- 12 Mahony C. Nurses' leader warns government not to pick fight with profession over seven day working. BMJ 2016;352:h6796.

13 Safe Staffing Alliance. www.safestaffing.org.uk/the-alliance.

14 Petitions, UK government and parliament. Keep the NHS bursary. 2016. <https://petition.parliament.uk/petitions/113491>.

Published by the BMJ Publishing Group Limited. For permission to use (where not already granted under a licence) please go to <http://group.bmj.com/group/rights-licensing/permissions>

This is an Open Access article distributed in accordance with the Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial (CC BY-NC 3.0) license, which permits others to distribute, remix, adapt, build upon this work non-commercially, and license their derivative works on different terms, provided the original work is properly cited and the use is non-commercial. See: <http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc/3.0/>.